September 15, 2019 - New Media Legal Publishing has added ten new programs to its growing library of continuing legal education (CLE) programs on its own CLE service, NewMediaNow! (www.newmedianow.us). The new programs are also available on West LegalEdcenter (westlegaledcenter.com). These programs, as well as other programs in New Media Legal Publishing's catalog of more than 100 CLE programs, are now available for viewing on demand through NewMediaNow! and West LegalEdcenter. The new program descriptions are included below.

Stand Up CLE: I Shouldn't Have to Tell You That

We all know that CLE programs are boring and a chore to watch. But we're breaking the rules – a CLE program that's intentionally funny and (gasp) entertaining, yet somehow still informative. In the latest installment of this popular series, Mark Wooster uses fictional lawyers from TV and film to explore the unique legal ethics issues that can arise from the use of jury consultants and the death of your client. Reserve your seat today and we'll waive the two-drink minimum! In the latest installment of this popular series, Mark Wooster tells the true tales of lawyer misconduct that are so obviously unethical that one continues to be astonished they occurred even after hearing about them.

Stand Up CLE: "Word to Your Ethics" Unethical Conduct by Lawyers in Classic 90's TV Series

In this installment of this popular series, we're looking at questionable ethical behavior by lawyers in 1990s TV shows, including a lot of sexist and racist behavior by lawyers that just got shrugged off or even accepted by fellow lawyers.

Stand Up CLE: Greatest Hits (Volume Two)

In this second compilation program, Mark Wooster revisits some of his favorite segments from our popular series where legal ethics collides head on with stand up comedy and bursts into flames of laughter.

Issues in the Blending of Mediation and Arbitration – Public and Private Delivering the 12th Annual Robert I. Weil Memorial Lecture, Professor Carrie Menkel-Meadow discusses the many issues that arise when dispute resolution professionals blend mediation principles and processes into arbitration or vice versa. While blended processes can have advantages over "pure" mediation or arbitration in certain cases, everyone involved need to ensure that "hybrid" processes give the parties adjudication of issues where needed, preserve their ongoing relationship where desired, and not cause the mediator, arbitrator or the lawyers representing the parties to violate the conflict of interest or other legal ethics rules that apply to the dispute resolution process.

Stand Up CLE: Greatest Hits (Volume One)

In this compilation program, Mark Wooster revisits some of his favorite segments from our popular series where legal ethics collides head on with stand up comedy and bursts into flames of laughter.

Stand Up CLE: Ethics for Thee but not the Supremes

In the latest installment of this popular series, Mark Wooster pokes fun at some fictional lawyers – including prosecutors, defense lawyers and even Supreme Court Justices! – who flagrantly violate the legal ethics rules in popular TV series.

The Curious Lawyer: Sex Law

Why is an actor who is paid to have sex on camera in a pornographic film not guilty of prostitution? In the latest installment of this popular series, Peter Afrasiabi answers this and many other interesting questions while reviewing the laws that govern sex, human sexual conduct, and the viewing of sexual conduct, including issues of constitutional, copyright, criminal, family and trademark law.
